

GEDDES DEDICATES VETERANS NEW CLUB

British Ambassador Greets
Former Soldiers in Imperial Service.

Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador to the United States, dedicated the new clubhouse of the British War Veterans, at 125 East Thirty-eighth street, yesterday afternoon, making a special trip here from Washington to do so. An informal reception was tendered to him by members of the club and a number of guests.

Accompanied by his secretary and H. O. Armstrong, British Consul-General in New York, Sir Auckland arrived at the clubhouse about 3 o'clock. A guard of honor composed of uniformed veterans of the British, Canadian, Australian and Scotch forces was drawn up at the entrance to the club. He was received by Col. Lemuel Lloyd, three winner of the British D. S. O. and president of the British War Veterans of America, and Capt. E. A. Simpson of the board of directors of the New York club, and escorted to the reception room of the club, where the dedication took place.

In dedicating the club the Ambassador said: "This club is a most excellent project and a monument to those brave men of our forces whose work in the field I had the privilege to personally see for some time in France. I saw their courage, their endurance, their bravery and self-sacrifice and marvelled at it. The establishment of a clubhouse in a great city like New York is especially fine. It will stand as a testimonial to the friendship which the English speaking people have for each other. Everything which will tend to increase the sympathy and understanding between the two nations should be done. This clubhouse should be a centre of friendship and good feeling between the veterans. I am confident of its success."

An inspection of the clubhouse followed. Sir Auckland expressing his pleasure at the accommodations and equipment of the club. He shook hands with every member of the club, asking each man the outfit in which he served and exchanging reminiscences with many men whose outfit he had seen in action. Among those present were Col. and Mrs. Burieligh, Col. John Muckle of Philadelphia, Major Foster Kennedy, president of the New York Council of British War Veterans; Col. Lemuel Lloyd, D. S. O.; Mary Sheldon, Australian Commissioner; Capt. Allan Pollock and Dr. W. L. Post.

The club, which has 950 members, is composed of men who have served under British command. The organization includes several veterans of the Boer war and the Indian fighting, as well as veterans of the world war. The clubhouse is at Lexington avenue and Thirty-eighth street, and has living quarters for the men in addition to recreation and reading rooms. A club canteen is also a feature of the new clubhouse. Several members of the British nurses' corps were present yesterday in uniform and were greeted by the Ambassador.
